

JONATA

JONATA is the embodiment of land, soul, and people coming together for a common goal; to produce singular wines from a singular place.

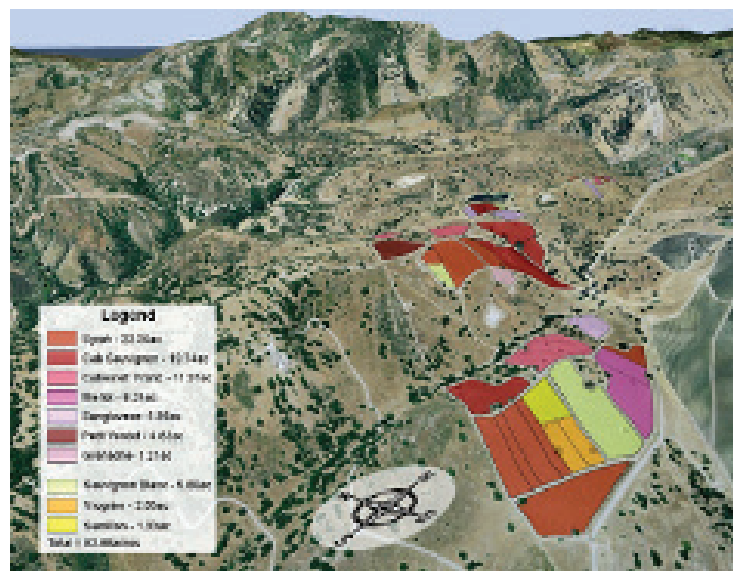

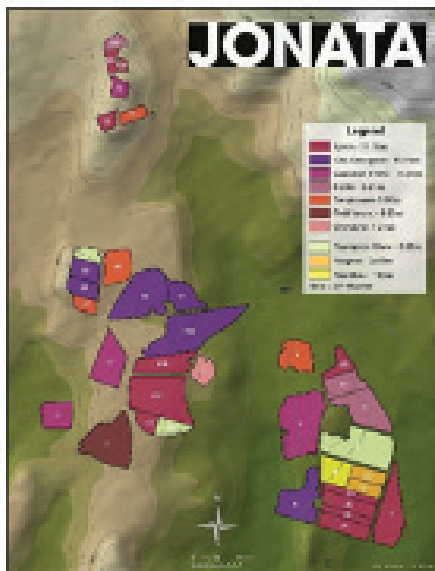

JONATA — BALLARD CANYON — SANTA BARBARA COUNTY

JONATA – Defined by Land, Soul, and People; working in conjunction to explore, take risks, and ultimately cultivate a continuously rich harvest.

- Location: Ballard Canyon's rolling northern foothills where the Pacific winds cool the vines and hold acidity.
- JONATA is home to a sustainable polyface ecosystem, essentially creating a working ranch. Integrating livestock (chickens, turkeys, sheep, goats and pigs) for soil health, fire protection, and compost. Growing cover crops, gardens and orchards for diversity and providing food for our team's families.
- Soil: Deep concentrations of careaga sand, like the beach was dropped into the foothills. Poor in nutrients, but surprisingly able to hold water. Creating vines that are far reaching and deep, resulting in wines of great tannin and structure.
- Climate consistent with that of the region. Perfect for experimenting with a wide range of varietals
