2013 ENTITY SHIRAZ

REVIEWS

Allow this time to breathe and it spreads its wings impressively. It tastes of dark, sweet-centred blackberry, chocolate mocha and ground spices but the way it combines freshness and depth is the thing; and then there's the way guy ropes of flavour-packed tannin stake a deep hold, keeping everything in place both now and long into the future.

Very deep red/purple colour, very young and bold. The bouquet is all about black plum and dark chocolate, while the palate is essency and rich, sweetly super-ripe and succulent, with massive tannins bringing up the rear.

From old vineyards throughout the Barossa floor and Eden Valley, Entity is a deeply-coloured, sumptuously fruited shiraz of layered spice and lingering black fruit appeal. It's elegantly supported by one-third new French oak, contributing subtle dark chocolate to a long, liquorice-accented finish. Fine, well-structured tannins promise medium-term potential.
